

NO TIME TO TEACH SCHOOL.

The San Francisco Star of the 21st rises to remark:

Talk about papers! There is a little four page daily published in Carson City, Nevada, called the APPEAL, and the editors of the "big dailies" might take a lesson or two from it in decent, honest, fearless journalism.

These kind remarks are appreciated by the editor of the APPEAL, but seriously, we have no time to open a night school of journalism in this city. We are too busy belting frauds—and are likely to be for some time to come—to teach our metrop fitan friends anything about editing newspapers.

The way the papers at the bay are edited is by the business manager. He is the supreme head of the paper and the regular editor is the figure head.

If some piece of scandalism comes out connected with a big firm, the reporters write it up and the editor denounces it, then along comes the business manager and runs his pencil through it and the large blue streak he lays down over the center of the article sends it to oblivion in short order, and the large double column adv. of the firm remains undisturbed.

There is an immense field for the display of independent journalism in San Francisco, but there seems to be no daily paper there having the courage to step in and strike blows irrespective of "pulls."

The judiciary is rotten; so rotten that its reeking sores ooze corruption every time the judiciary moves. But while the courts are in the last stages of leprosy and judges are rolling in ill gotten wealth, the papers who attack the evil, go after the little fish and do not dare to touch the big ones.

Politics is simply a rushing sewer of filth and it grows filthier every year, but when the party whip cracks the papers fall in line as usual, and try to distract attention from their own condition by calling Nevada a "rotten burrough."

Some day a paper absolutely fearless and absolutely unmuzzled will rise in San Francisco and show the people of California the real state of affairs.

But it will not be soon.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

The Journal accuses the Enterprise with having abandoned the silver fight at the instance of D. O. Mills, and quotes the following to substantiate its charge:

"Important as is the silver question in its bearing upon national affairs, it will not be an issue in the Presidential campaign. Possibly a few stupid papers in 'strong silver communities' having nothing to say will drop back into the past and quarrel over the responsibility of their respective parties. Possibly, also, the same class of papers will vie with each other in claiming for their respective parties the greater friendship for silver. This species of bickering without argument is about all there will be of the silver issue in the Presidential campaign. Neither party will adopt a silver platform, nor will either party nominate a silver man for President. The Republicans will nominate Harrison, who is a gold man. Blaine, who was for a time pushed by the gold men, because it was believed he would be strong enough to hold Republican silver Senators in check, is a scarcely supposable candidate, notwithstanding all the noise his friends have made; but even if he should be the nominee, he is also a single standard man and would not run on a free coinage platform."

If the above reflects the sentiments of the Enterprise, the charge of the Journal is true.

Such an editorial might have crept into the paper while the editor was away.

We would like to hear what the Enterprise has to say in the matter before condemning it.

To hold the silver fight as no longer a national issue, is a complete abandonment by Nevada and the West of all we have been struggling for.

The Chicago Mutual Life Benefit Association and the North American Benefit Associate went to pieces in Chicago yesterday. They will not be able to pay over 20 cents on the dollar.
